

Journal of Ancient Egyptian Interconnections

Editorial Announcements

The current issue of JAEI is our second annual research reports issue. This special issue is published as the final fascicle of each volume. The development has already been warmly received and we feel that it will provide an added service to the community of scholars and students of Egyptian interconnections.

The updates regarding recent, in-progress, and planned work provide researchers an opportunity to share "news" of what is being worked on, where, and by whom. As may be seen in the current fascicle, the updates range from summaries of recent archaeological field seasons with interconnection-relevant finds to the announcement of recent or forthcoming publications, conferences, etc. - anything that will help those working in the area of Egyptian interconnections to stay updated. We feel that this sharing of news will provide the opportunity for increased communication between researchers in our field, for more sharing of data, and ultimately, for increased collaboration between individuals working on similar or related projects. It is our hope that this initiative will help accomplish these worthwhile goals.

The first fascicle of JAEI volume 6 – which is expected to appear at the beginning of March 2014 - will be a special guest edited issue devoted to invited papers on interconnections between ancient Egypt and its neighbors to the south. Issue 6:2 is planned as a regular fascicle for which general contributions may be submitted up to April 1, 2014. Fascicle 6:3 will be another specially themed invited issue. Finally, as explained above, JAEI 6:4 is being planned as our third annual research reports and updates issue.
